FRIDAY EVENING, NOV. 26.

Diptheria.

Twenty years ago diptheria, at least, by that name, was almost unknown. To-day, accord ing to the New York Times, it has nearly assumed the proportions of an epidemic in that city and its neighboring towns. It is also prevailing in other parts of the land. Although its ravages are chiefly among the young and feeble, it attacks adults as well as children. This disease of the threat is said to differ from all other forms of sore throat previously known. It is a very malignant and often fatal disease. It was first observed and described by M. Bretonneau, of Tours, in 1818. It is characterized by a peculiar inflammation of the mucous membrane of the throat, or pharynx, accompanied by the production of a false membrane. This is said to make its appearance in nearly all cases in the shape of grayish brown patches, or as one authorty says, in the form of a white spot on the pharyox or tonsils, from which it extends, producing at last suffocation. Hence it is of the utmost importance to watch closely the throats of children who are apparently ill with cold and sore throat. Usually iever and prostration occur in the early stages of the disease, though in some instances the false mem brane is formed suddenly and almost without warning. It should be remarked that diptheria, ordinarily, is not a difficult disease to com bat when it is treated in time. If the throats of ailing children are frequently examined there will be little danger that parents will mestake incipient diptheria for an ordinary cold. The New York Times remarks, no doubt with truth, that scores of children have died of diptheria who would in fall probability be now alive had the grayish-brown patches in the throat been discovered at their first appearance, and a competent physician been promptly summoned.

It seems to be agreed that the disease is owing in some measure to the neglect of sanitary measures. Sewer gas, damp cellars, and the neighborhood of malarious marshes, are mentioned among the causes of its prevalence. Yet all those existed twenty years ago, when the disease was rare. It may be added that diptheria is generally believed to be contagious. Whether the cause of this disease be poisoned air or polluted water or not, it can do no harm to avoid the violation of sanitary rules, especially as regards defective drainage and sewer
